Dear Mr. Sahni:

David and I are writing to thank you and Mr. Nobel for taking time from your busy schedules to speak to our Telecommunications For Information Systems class.

It was both interesting and professionally helpful to our students to hear how a firm is organized for the practice of network design, implementation and support. Your presentation made the importance of understanding the business needs behind a network design problem both clear and compelling. Your discussion of the many technical and practical issues to be addressed in the network design problem that our students had just completed was very well received. We were gratified that you would take the time to develop a solution to that problem, and the students were impressed that your solution came in under the 'budget challenge' – few of them managed that!

Please accept our sincere thanks for a superb job. We hope that you might be willing to present again next year.

Best Regards,
